

Between-families evaluation

Whole families are held out, not random individuals. A test line has no full sibs in the training set and is connected to it only through the common recurrent parent. Roughly 20% of families are held out, and the partition is redrawn 100 times per location-trait combination.

